

There are many reasons doctors use mesh... and the list keeps growing.

Do you leak?

Vaginal mesh is used in many incontinence repairs.

Had a baby?

Young women are at risk for the dangers associated with mesh implantation through cesarean sections and vaginal repairs after birth.

Had a hysterectomy?

Repairs are often made with medical mesh to prevent organs from prolapse following a hysterectomy.

The risks are NOT rare and include:

- Neuropathy
- Pain
- Infection
- Immune Disorders
- Bleeding
- Sexual Dysfunction
- Scarring
- Prolapse
- Disability
- Cancer
- Sepsis
- Death

If you've been injured, you're not alone. Many other women from all walks of life are facing the heartbreaking realities you are now. There are only two things to remember...

Fight to survive.

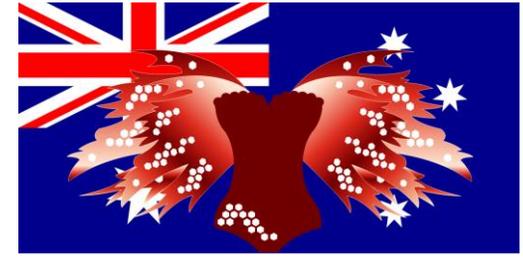

Warn others.

The future of your daughters and granddaughters are at stake as pharmaceutical companies and doctors put a priority on profits over people. The victims are younger and younger, women in their early 20's have been maimed for life due to mesh implantation and subsequent problems.

Mesh impacts your Life

Feeling Frisky?

Sex will never be the same, if at all.

Enjoy Driving?

Sitting may well be a thing of the past depending which nerve is damaged during the procedure or as mesh shrinks and twists inside the body as time goes on.

Like Exercise?

You're going to be lucky to walk let alone keep your body in shape. Mesh is toxic inside humans... and complications include the decline of health along with immune system disorders and organ damage.

Live Busy?

You won't be anymore. Painkillers will become your best friends... either making you appear manic and insane or just taking your energy away to sleep all day. Pain management won't help with nerve pain and it will become debilitating as time goes on.

Like your Independence?

Mesh takes everything as health declines. Finances are destroyed, marriages wrecked, jobs terminated. An uncertain future where you're just going to be fighting to survive an internal war.

But I don't have mesh... my doctor didn't tell me I had anything like that done.

Are you SURE? These days doctors lie... and once you're in the operating room consent has already been given for the doctor to make any and all decisions on your behalf. It's a sad fact that many doctors lie outright to their patients.

Perhaps you've heard your doctor say:

It's NOT the mesh

You're the ONLY one with a problem

It's all in your HEAD

You just need PAIN management

If you're doctor isn't listening... it's time to take matters into your own hands and find out if you have mesh.

OBTAIN your records from the hospital where the procedure was done (many times the mesh is not listed with the doctor's records and only available from the hospital in which the procedure was performed).

KNOW your rights. You won't have as many as you think... but you must warn others by notifying the FDA of your complication.

REMEDY the situation the best you can... and make it a priority to find a doctor who can remove the ENTIRE mesh including anchors (legs or arms). UCLA in California is currently the only place for full removal without further complications performing full mesh removal.

Rules to Remember

Doctors Lie.

It's becoming increasingly rampant that doctors outright lie or skirt the issues associated with implants.

It's just tape... not mesh.

There is no such thing as "tape"... it is MESH and they are rebranding and rewording it due to the lawsuits and trauma being caused. You'll also hear it described as a "sling" to hold up organs.

It's not the bad mesh is it?

There is no "good mesh" on the market to date. It does not matter what BRAND you have. Mesh is a polypropylene plastic product. All have higher complication rates than doctors are revealing.

I can just sue if I'm injured

It's not that easy. Lawsuits take YEARS to see any kind of compensation. You may not even qualify for a lawsuit. Lawyers are not taking ANY new cases right now. Many women have found even if they qualify and come to a settlement before a courtroom battle... the settlement isn't even enough to cover the cost of the initial surgery let alone any repairs that need to be made. Is your health and life worth the suffering?
